RELATED EXPERIENCE

Fort Vancouver National Historic Site

Museum Technician GS 07

October 2009 – Present

My current job is mainly museum collections management; specific to the curation of 19th century fur trade and 19th and 20th century military material culture. I am conversant in basic preservation of museum objects such as archaeological specimens, archival materials, furniture, ceramics, glassware, and organic objects. I work regularly with numerous software programs including: ANCS+, ArcMap, Excel, Access, Photoshop, and InDesign. I supervise seasonal employees, contractors, and volunteers working on various curation and museum related projects. I also edit the Northwest Cultural Resources Institute's (NCRI) thrice yearly NCRI Report.

October 2006 – September 2009

Museum collections management; specific to the curation of 19th century fur trade and 19th and 20th century military material culture. I am conversant in basic preservation of museum objects such as archaeological specimens, archival materials, furniture, ceramics, glassware, and organic objects. As part of the position I helped to create a mount-making workshop on-site, as well as contributing to various site-specific publications and the NCRI Report.

Fort Vancouver National Historic Site

Archaeological Technician GS 05

2005

I was originally hired to work on and help supervise the cataloging of artifacts Fort Colville. I developed guidelines for cataloging metal artifacts and faunal remains, and put together a reference guide for metal artifacts related to Fort Colville. In FY 2006 I was hired to be the lab director for the archaeology lab and the volunteer supervisor for cultural resources. I worked on a number of projects, including laboratory processing, artifact analysis, field work/excavation, mount-making, VIP supervision, and teaching for the Fort Vancouver Annual Summer Field School.
